The Arctic Highlanders.

The Arctic Highlanders are, from their environment, a nomadic race. They rarely have their summer abiding place where their winter settlements are, and the dwellings for the two seasons are of entirely different character. Their winter huts, or igloos, are of two kinds of construction. Those for temporary use while traveling are built of snow or ice. Those for permanent use are located where the fierce northwest winds are tempered by great cliffs, and are built of stone; an entrance to each is had through a long, low tunnel, and both are covered by turf. The interiors are about six feet square and high, and lined with skins, with the fur outward. One-half the interior is taken up by a platform on which the family sleep and sit, and the other halt is used as a receptacle for all kinds of filth and refuse. In these constricted quarters five, six and sometimes more Eskimos swelter in a terrific heat from a small oil lamp, and enjoy themselves during the long arctic night, which lasts from the first week in November to the middle of February. This enjoyment consists in eating, sleeping and visiting. As soon as the spring thaws begin, the roofs of the stone igloos are taken off to allow the elements to cleanse the interiors, and the occupants betake themselves to tupics, or skin tents, set up perhaps miles from their winter habitations. These tupics are made of sealskin with the fur all scraped off, and all are made exactly alike, and of the same number of pieces. The interiors are fitted up the same as the igloos and are nearly as filthy. Indeed, filth and vermin seem a necessary accompaniment of the Eskimos. Water for washing purposes they detest with great heartiness. I belive a cat could be persuaded to submit to a washing more readily than an Arctic Highlander. Only a bribe of uncommon value will tempt one to undertake a bath. I tried the experiment on a woman at "Red Cliff House," Mr. Peary's winter quarters on one occasion, and it was only when I offered a thimble that the protesting and almost tearful creature consented. Crawling slowly to a near by stream she dipped one hand in the water and hurriedly rubbed it on her face from her eyes to her chin, and then scrambled back to the house as fast as her feet could carry her, where she wiped the objectionable liquid off on a towel belonging to one of Mr. Peary's companions, and demanded her reward. Her face looked a little brighter, but the accumulated dirt of years still remained on and behind her cars .- New York In-

Cured of a Broken Back.

Drs. James and Thomas McCann, of Pittsburg, are about ready to report to the medical fraternity the case of John Mulligan, who was cured of a broken back. In October, 1888, Mulligan received a fracture of the vertebræ, and, as usual with such cases, was paralyzed from the loins down. Eight days after Mulligan's entrance to the hospital the physicians, in the presence of seventy-five students of the West Pennsylvania Medical College, made an incision eight inches long in the man's back. The vertebræ were exposed. A fracture of the arcnes of the tenth and eleventh vertebree was found. Fragments of bone were pressing on the spinal cord. This pressure was relieved. Two months later Mulligan could move

In ten months the patient walked out of the hospital. He is now at work. The report of the operation was kept secret until it was proved a perfect success .- New York Mail and Express.

extreme, for although he had been alting for some time, Justice Lamar appeared to be gradually gaining in health.

He went from Washington to Macon about a month before, and had been visiting at the residence of W. H. Virgin, in Vineville, a suburb of that city.

During the afternoon at about 3 o'clock Justice Lamar took his overcoat, intending to go to the city, but was met at the door by a trient, Dr. Llewellyn, with whom he returned to the sitting room. At that time, and during all the afternoon he was in good sprits, and at dinner at 6:59 in the evening he seemed to have a good appetite. Dr. Llewellyn left the house about 8 o'clock, and a few minutes later the Justice was seized with violent pains in the heart, and died at the hour mentioned.

Lucius Quintus Cinc'innatus Lamar was born in Putnam County, Ga., September 1, 1823. He was graduated from the E nory College in Georgia in 1845, and was admitted that he was in Meory in 1847. In 1849 he held.

College in Georgia in 1845, and was admitted to the bar in Macon in 1847. In 1849 he held to the bar in Macon in 1847. In 1849 he held the place of adjunct professor of mathematics in the University of Mississippi. He was elected to the Georgia Legislature in 1853 and 1854. Then he returned to Mississippi, and in 1857 was elected to Congress. He was re-elected in 1859, and resigned to take his seat in the Secession Convention of his State. Later he entered the Confederate Army as Lieutenant-Colonel in the Nineteenth Mississippi Regiment. He resigned from active service on account of ill health, and was sent as Commissioner to Russio. He did not get there until 1863, when his services were useless. At the close of the war he resumed teaching in the University of Mississi pl. He was elected to Congress again in 1872. Re-elected in 1874, and in 1876 was chosen United States Sena-and in 1870 was chosen United States Sena-ter. On March 5th, 1885, he became Secre-tary of the Interior in President Cleveland's Cabinet.

Tresident Cleveland appointed him to the Supreme Court bench in 1888. Just after entering Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet he was married for the second time, the bride being Mrs. Henrietta D. Hoit, widow of W. & Holt, of Macon, Ga. He lost his first wife while he was a member of the House. By her he had two children, a son and a daughter, both now married, and well known in Washington society. Washington society.

"Old Chris."

"The queerest character I ever met is old Chris Holgrave, a Mormon missionary, who lives in the Eik Mountains, north of Laramie," said Major Thomas Breckinridge, President of the Story Tellers' Club in session at the Southern.

"Old Chris is well known throughout the entire West. He formerly lived in Salt Lake City and was a power in the church, but when the split came on the question of polygamy he cast his fortune with the Joe Smith Saints and moved up into the Eik Mountains, where he has acquired world wide fame as a trapper and a rifle shot. Every spring, when the trapping season is over, he makes his staff and sets forth to preach the gospel of one wife Mormonism, tramping over Wyoming, Idaho, Colorado and Utah. He is a splendid specimen of physical manhood, six feet one, straight as an Indian, tough as spring steel, with long, white hair and beard sweeping down below his belt. He enjoys the reputation of having killed more bears than any American living or dead.

"A year ago last spring he brought into Laramie and sold 500 bear skins, the result of one winter's trapping. He was assisted, however, by his three grown sons. Many of the skins were those of enormous grizzlies, that 'var-mint' being extremely plentiful in the Elk Mountains. He is marked all over with the teeth and jaws of bruin. . He said he was trapping along a narrow mountain path, en route to his traps, and in making a sharp turn he met bruin face to face. He had with him a savage wolf dog and a muzzle loading rifle. To the left the mountain arose abruptly and to the right was a chasm 300 feet deep. The foot path was but a yard wide. The dog sprang forward and attacked the bear, but bruin cuffed him over into the chasm as though he were a rabbit. Then he advanced on the apostle of the silver plate revelation. Old Chris threw down on him, but his old rifle hung fire, and he only succeeded in wounding his assailant. The bear rushed forward and be threw it his fur cap. It snuffed at it, tore it into tragments and cuffed them over the ledge. That gave Chris time to reload, and when bruin again advanced he got a bullet in the brain."-St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Silent, but Alert.

Parisian thief-takers are chiefly noticeable for an exceptionally ordinary appearance, if one may use the expression. It is rather disappointing at first sight to any one who knows detective literature; but to look ordinary and not to be so is obviously a great merit in the business, when you come to think of it. One of them pulls out of his pocket a specimen of the homely instrument which does duty for handcuffs among these men.

They call it a cabriolet, or, more correctly, ligotte, and it consists of some twenty inches of whipcord, with a small piece of wood at either end. The cord is passed round the prisoner's wrists and twisted together. The thing is more efficient than might be supposed, and your true Parisian thief-taker takes a certain pride in using simple means. He is great at ready-made and ingenious devices. One plan with a troublesome captive is to take off one of his boots, which makes him limp; another is to unfasten his clothes so that he is obliged to use at least one hand in holding them up.

The men make their own ligottes, and sometime produce a more formidable article by using strong wire in loops instead of whipcord. But the real master goes. With the majority of the criminals his mere personal influence suffices results of wrong living. to impose obedience, and when he meets with a desperate character he prefers to trust to his good right hand rather than any weapon of offence.-New York

The First Complete Bible. The first complete Bible printed in England was issued in 1535 without any publisher's name. It was the work of the celebrated Miles Coverdale, who incorporated, with revisions, Tyndale's books of the New Testament, as well as his Pentateuch and Book of Jonah. It was thus only partially original as far as Coverdale was concerned, the remaining portion being a translation of a translation. No perfect copy of this edition is known to be in existence. A copy sold a few years ago in London for a sum equal to $600 had the title, nineteen leaves and the map missing. The Coverdate Bible is the one mentioned in these notes heretofore as the "Bug Bible" and the "Treacle Bible," on account of two curious passages found therein. The passage in Jeremiah which we now read as "Is there no balm in Gilead?" is made by Coverdale to read as "Is there no more treacle at Gahabad?" The psalm which says "Thou shalt not be afraid of the terror by night" reads, "Thou shalt not nede to bee afrayed for any bugs by night." The ninth psalm, in that portion which should say "Put them in fear, O Lord," Coverdaic makes to say "Set a schoolmaster over them."-St. Louis Re-

BAKING POWDER is absolutely pure. No other equals it, or approaches it in leavening strength, purity, or wholesomeness. (See U. S. Gov't Reports.) No other is made from cream of tartar specially refined for it and chemically pure. No other makes such light, sweet, finely-flavored, and wholesome food. No other will maintain its strength without loss until used, or will make bread or cake that will keep fresh so long, or that can be eaten hot with impunity, even by dyspeptics. No other is so economical.

The Baking Powders yow being offered in this vicinity, with the statement that they are "as good as Royal," have been shown by the official analyses to be composed of alum and detrimental to health.

. The official chemists of the United States and Canada, State analysts, municipal boards of health, and physicians indorse the great qualities of the Royal Baking Powder.
